These estimates and the formal proposition are in the hands of Charles E. Speer, who was secretary of the old terminal committee. That committee, however, with about 40 members representing diverse interests, after a year's work failed to agree on any site for the proposed terminals, and referred the selection back to the city commission. Subsequently the city bought the present terminals from the River and Raii Storage company. The old terminal committee later aided in securing authority for the city to issue an ad-thority for the city to issue an as-tional $500,000 of bonds, and the ap-ritionment of a terminal commission first issue of bonds was sold, an-out $260,000 of that fund remains in e decided.

The plans advocated by Mr. Phariers never formally presented to eiththe city commission or to the Mississippi river commission or the ansists sissippi river commission, by which body, as well as the federal war department, any such plans for in any way changing the course of the river, must be approved.

J. Heiskell Weatherford, who was city engineer for a number of years, is familiar with the river and its work, which he has watched all his life. Mr. Weatherford said recently that he has no doubt that with a sufficient expenditure of money, the plans originally proposed by Mr. Pharr could be carried out. Estimates made two years ago would of course have to be revised, as the bar is much larger and cost of such engineering projects would be higher.

Prominent Police Official Says Improvement Is Due to Tanlac.

As Engineering Project It Is Feasible, Say Experts, Although Never Seriously

Seven or eight years ago a little towhead poked its head out of the waters of the Misalssippi right in front of the Memphis harber. It was discovered by a newspaper reporter, and river men named it the Jim Crow bar, after James Crow, who died galiantly later as an aviator in France.

A year or two later, when the bar had grown to be a sizeable island a man tried to convince the city authorities then in office that the city ought to claim the bar and extend the wharf upon it, taking in the 30 or 40 acres that then formed the bar. He was laughed at as a crazy man. River shippers and steamboat men demanded that the Mississippi river commission maintain the harbor lines and since then some hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent, part of it in constructing the canal from Wolf river to keep the harbor channel open.

Now once more, the gradual filling up of the canal and the steady growth of the size of the bar, or island, which now probably contains more than 100 acres, has renewed interest among shippers, river men and engineers in a plan for utilizing the big sandbar which was proposed about two years ago.

Nearly everybody in Kannas City sither knows or has heard of Capt. J. Ennis, who lives at $21 Jackson avenue. Kannas City. Missouri. Captain Ennis has been a member of the Kannas City police force for thrity years and is not only one of the oldest in point of service, but one of the most popular officers in the department. In a recent statement regarding the benefits his son, Wilfred, has derived from the use of Taniac, Captain Ennis said:

"The change I have seen take place in my son's health during the past few weeks certainly speaks well for Taniac. Wilfred served with Company A 12th Engineers in France for nearly two years and on returning was fuffering from rheumatism and stomach trouble and was in a very badly run down condition. He tells me he had been suffering from aching joints in his shoulders, arms and legs for almost a year. He had no appetite and his stomach was so weak and upset that he could not retain much of anything he would eat. He complained of headache most of the time, often had disay spells, and was so weak he could just barely drag around.

"I had been reading so many statements from Kansas City people about Taniac that I decided there must be something to it, and after inquiring about it of some parties, whom I have known for years, at the drug store, I bought a bottle for Wilfred. Well, he had not finished the first bottle until his appetite was better and the pains in his knees and shoulders were not so bad. He has talken three bottles up to this time and can eat and digest anything he wants. He was very nervous and restless before taking Taniac and could not sleep much, but now he sleeps eight to nine hours every night. He now has a good position as yard clerk for the Kansas City Terminal Railway and is able to waik around and do his worth with case, as the rheumatic pains have left him entirely. He has recommended Taniac to several of his friends who have used it with fine results. I consider Taniac the best medicine out for such troubles and I will giadly verify this statement for Close Canal. That plan, in brief, was a proposition to fill in the canal, allowing Wolf river to resume its old course, and to raise the level of the bar or island, by filling in with sand from the river, to not less than a height of 52 feet from zero on the Memphis gauge. Such a course, engineers pointed out several years ago, would reclaim from 200 to 303 acres of valuable ground, much of it owned by the city of Memphis under riparian rights, and a small portion benefit of the project was placed before members of the old river terminal committee by Harry N. Pharr, one of the best known civil engineers in the city, who estimated the cost of converting the old mud har into valuable sites for terminals and warehouses, at about $1,500,000. He also estimated that the americal description of the figured at that time would embrace 239 acres, at $1,000,000 or over, from which the city, if the property were sold or leased, would derive taxes sufficient to retire the first issue of $500,009 of municipal terminal bonds in about 29 years. Stomach Out of Fix?

The terminal commissioners have no intention this year of planning the immediate use of the second bond issue, as the erratic course of the river recently, leads engineers to doubt the wisdom of planning any expensive terminal facilities until the results of possible changes in the river channel and the results of the work of the United States engineers in the immediate vicinity of the Memphis harbor, are decided.

cost of such engineering projects would be higher. What engineers know as the regimen of the river in the reaches above Memphis has not been established, but it seems now, so engineers familiar with the course of the river say, that it is beginning to approach stability. Engineers say that while the course of the Mississippi cannot be altered, it may be and has been measurably controlled for many years by the engineering works conducted by the government and that if in the judgment of competent engineers, the present channel is to be held practically unchanged, the plan proposed by Mr. Pharr and his associates would be in every way feasible.
